Farmers Are Warned About Use of Poisons Respirators Advised For Dusting Operations

This summer American farmers and gardeners will use about 1,000,000,000 pounds of bug-killing materials, much of it containing parathion, especially those highly effective on the destructive leaf aphid.

Insecticides containing parathion are used a great deal by commercial fruit producers.

Now produced by several chemical companies, parathion in its original state is a bromish liquid. But as a commercial insecticide it comes in powder form to be used for dusting or mixed with water for spraying.

While highly effective on insects, parathion also is extremely poisonous to humans. That is why some kind of respirator is recommended for farmers and growers spraying or dusting with insecticides containing the chemical.

A light weight and not uncomfortable respirator, with a molded rubber facepiece has been developed by the Mine Safety Appliance company of Pittsburgh which will fill the needs of most farmers.

Proper equipment on the modern farm is essential if the farmer is to protect himself, his employees, and gain top production.

Farmers of the Future May Find TV Indispensible

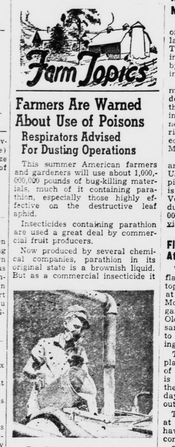
Tired of trudging to the barn to check up on the cows and chickens? Soon you may be able to make such nocturnal inspections by flipping a switch and looking at a television screen.

Scientists of the Radio Corporation of America have unveiled an experimental laboratory model of what could be the television interiors of the future. It could save farmers many a step when they hear a noise in the barn or chicken house at night.

Key to the apparatus is RCA's industrial TV system. This compact equipment uses a home-movie-size camera, which could be installed in any convenient spot where it could overlook the interior of the barn. The camera's sensitive pickup tube can see in almost any light the human eye can.

The picture is transmitted over several hundred feet of cable to a master control unit no bigger than the smallest table-model TV set.

Install the unit by your bedside, hang up your coat, and prop up your feet. Television may be a farm fixture before you know it.



Respirators should always be worn when handling parathion-base insecticides. Protective rubber gloves also should be used since the toxic chemical can be absorbed through the skin.

Iron Ore Imports Set Highest Mark in History of Nation

Nearly 9.2 million net tons of iron ore came into the United States last year from 15 foreign countries. That was the largest amount ever imported, exceeding the 1949 total by about one million tons. In 1945 imports were only 1.3 million tons.

Meanwhile, rapid progress was made in the development of iron ore deposits in Venezuela after more than a dozen years of planning and investment. The first ore from one new property in that country arrived at an eastern port of the United States in the latter part of March.

Venezuela is expected to become an important source of ore for the United States. The property shipping the first ore, mentioned above, is one of two developments in Venezuela. It is expected to produce eventually at the rate of 3,-000,000 tons a year and may later yield 5,000,000 tons a year.

Flag Flies Continuously At Keysville Terra Rubra

WASHINGTON — The American flag was found to be jammed at top of its staff in front of the farm at Terra Rubra, near Keysville, Md., but the owner, Roy E. Baumgardner, made no attempt to haul Old Glory down. It is not necessary for Baumgardner to conform to the custom of raising and lowering the colors at sunset.

Terra Rubra farm is the birthplace of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner," and is so one of the five places where the Stars and Stripes may wave, day and night, year in and year out.

The present flagstaff was erected at the farm in 1948. Two banners have been previously worn out by continual service.

Other locations where the flag may be flown round the clock are the Capitol Building; the war memorial at Worchester, Mass.; Fort Mcenry, Md., where the sight of the flag inspired the national anthem in 1813, and the author's grave at Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Frederick, Md.

The wedding of Miss Mary Esther Siddons of Dundas and Frederick Russell Cawthorne of Spout Spring, both graduates of Lynchburg College, was a recent event in Perseverance Christian Church, Dundas, with the Rev. Walter G. Forbes officiating. The reception was held in the recreation hall of the church.

Decorations for the wedding and the reception conformed to a green and white mctif and were carried out in pine, white gladioli and asters, supplemented by tall standards of candles. Wedding music was provided by Herbert Augus, organist, and Robert G. Forbes, vocalist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Bernard Earl Siddons, Jr., the bride was gowned in white Swiss organdie over white taffeta, made with snug bodice fastened with small se."-eov-ered buttons, Peter Pan collar and short sleeves with turned-back cuffs. Flower applique embroidery on the waist was outlined with tiny crystal beads and the full skirt, ending in a chapel train, was similarly embroidered. She wore white organza mitts and her French illusion fingertip veil was held in place by a bandeau of organdie. She carried a nosegay of roses, gardenias and stephantosis, arranged in fan shape.

Attendants of the bride were Mrs. Thomas I. DuBusk, Jr., of Crewe, sister of the bridegroom, matron of honor; and Miss Bernelle Siddons, of Richmond, aunt of the bride, maid of honor, both in green; Misses Arnette Snead of Richmond and Barbara Gilbert of Great Neck, N. Y., in lavender; Mrs. Stanley Harris, Jr., of Kenbridge, and Miss Mildred Hawthorne of Richmond, in pink; Mrs. George B. Bridgeforth, Jr., of Kenbridge and Miss Mary Elba Fraher of Blackstone, both in blue.

Russell Cawthorne of Spout Spring father of the bridegroom, was best man; groomsmen were C. Conway Candler, Jr. and Farrar L. Marsh of Lynchburg; William F. Bergman, III, of Blackstone; Courtney T. King of Concord; S. Robert Lawson of Appomattox; Robert A. King, Jr., of Norfolk and Thomas I. DuBusk, Jr., of Crewe.

Mrs. George E. Siddons of Dundas, aunt of the bride, hostess for the reception, was in a dusty rose lace dress with stephanotis at the shoulder and Mrs. Cawthorne, of Spout Spring, mother of the bridegroom, was in ice blue crepe with Talisman roses.

After a southern wedding trip the couple will make their home in Lynchburg at 2113 Carrington Road.

New Dusting Methods Tested in Michigan Charging Fungicides May Revolutionize Spraying

Fighting insects and plant diseases which damage farm crops may be revolutionized by charging dust particles in fungicides and insecticides with electricity, Michigan researchers reported recently.

Laboratory tests by Michigan State College researchers show charging of dust particles of normal dusting compounds gets five to ten times better coverage than through usual dusting processes.

A. W. Ferrall, head of the MSC

agricultural engineering department, says field tests will be made this summer to try the new process commercially.

Fine dust particles of the fungicides and insecticides are charged with from 12,000 to 20,000 volts as they emerge from the nozzle of a regular commercial dusting machine. This high charge is held for several seconds. With dusts blown at a velocity of a mile a minute, it permits them to travel a great distance before losing the electric charge.

Engineers estimate the cost of necessary electrical attachments for the ordinary four-row duster would run around $300.
